Glengoyne Distillery is situated at Dumgoyne in the southern Highlands and has been in continuous operation producing single malts for over 175yrs. The distillery is one of only two distilleries remaining today that uses Golden Promise barley which is low in yield but high in quality.

The distillery's water supply comes from the Glengoyne Burn which flows from the nearby Dumgoyne hill into the distillery grounds before continuing on to Loch Lomond.

Tasting Note: Fresh green apples, toffee and a hint of nuttiness. This is the taste of distilling slower than anyone else in Scotland, of barley they dry by air – never peat – and of oak casks selected by hand.
