Double Cask batch number DC0110 is a marriage of portions from ten different casks, ranging in age from 7 to 20 years. As well as whisky from several American oak ex-Bourbon casks, this batch also contains whisky from both American and French oak casks, which have been previously used for either Tawny, white wine, or red wine.

DC110 is the first Double Cask release to be bottled at a variable ABV, whereas previous releases were bottled at 45%. By tailoring the ABV for each batch of Double Cask, we can choose an ABV that brings out the best in the whisky. For DC110, that was 46.9%.

Nose: Pineapple lumps and glacé ginger, cocoa and cigar box. A wonderful entry of aromas! Horlicks, a musky floral note, orange peel, gingerbread, creaming soda and epic fudge with a touch of treacle. All with an olive on top.

Palate: Great body and rolling texture. Loads of biscuity malt, a jammy wave of dark berries conflates with a herbal wave, like vine leaves. Incredibly fudgy, chocolate flavoured. Part way through there's a change toward the fruit: peaches, mango, apricot, and then ruby grapefruit juice.

Finish: Malt biscuits GALORE. Chocolate orange.
Stonefruit, grapes, melon and pineapple waves increase toward the end, and then it's a wonderful finish of fennel honey and chocolate fudge.
