Etsu Pacific Ocean Water Gin is a Japanese spirit crafted at the Asahikawa Distillery in Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost island. This gin is distinguished by its use of seawater from the Sea of Japan, imparting a subtle iodised flavour that complements its botanical profile. The distillation process begins with a 22-hour maceration of botanicals, including juniper berries, bitter orange peel, liquorice root, angelica, and coriander. This extended maceration enhances the gin's depth and complexity.
