The Boatyard Distillery is best reached by water – it is nestled on the windswept shores of County Fermanagh's Lough Erne, around a fifteen-minute drive from Enniskillen. Boatyard's story begins with local lad Joe McGirr, who spent years in Edinburgh's drinks industry before returning to his home county with the intention of producing a world-class cocktail gin. The result is Boatyard Double Gin, so called because juniper is infused into the spirit at two different points during the gin-making process. This gives the gin its incredibly fresh, punchy character, along with the use of far more coriander than most comparable spirits, meaning it will stand up to any cocktail.
