Weingut Rieger is an exciting biodynamic winery located at the southern end of Germany's Baden region, just a few yards from the edge of the Black Forest. Initially, this was a traditional agricultural estate with arable and livestock farming, as well as a small viticulture component. Bernhard and his wife, Josepha Rieger, increased the focus on wine in the mid-1980s, and vineyards around Betberg were purchased or leased. In 1986, the doors of their wine tavern were opened, allowing interested wine drinkers to enjoy their wines with food. Their son, Philipp, joined the winery in 2013 and continued to develop it by expanding their holdings and creating a new cellar, warehouse, and wine shop, while steadily raising the quality of the wines.
