Established in 1999 by the former Technical Director of Vega Sicilia and veteran winemaker, Javier Zaccagnini, Aalto was born from a shared ambition to create a wine that authentically expressed the diverse terroirs of Ribera del Duero. This vision attracted the backing of the Masaveu and Nozaleda families in 2006, whose involvement further elevated the estate's capacity for precision and depth.

Originally vinified in rented facilities in Roa, Aalto's growing reputation led to the creation of a purpose-built winery in Quintanilla de Arriba in 2004. Nestled within a 15-hectare estate, the winery marries cutting-edge winemaking technology with a design that reflects and respects the surrounding landscape. Completed in 2016, the final phase of construction prioritised sustainability and community integration.
