Blackwater Distillery, based on the south coast of Ireland, is creating limited, innovative Irish Whiskies. The small-scale distillery crafts small batches that are unique in style and character. In the 1970's Irish Whiskey had largely been redesigned as a blended product, so the flavours that made Irish the world's whiskey of choice were lost to time. On a journey to rediscover the true characteristics of Irish whiskey, spirits writer and TV producer Peter Mulryan set about on a journey to uncover lost flavours and rediscover the traditional distillation process that makes Irish whiskey so unique – it was a journey back to its roots. Blackwater's small-scale production allows for meticulous attention to detail. With a double distillation process, and a focus on the source of the flavour, found from the grain, the whiskies are made using 100% Irish malt, raw barley, oats, wheat and rye to retain maximum character and flavour.

Blackwater Irish Whisky, The Full Irish is a blend of 45% pot distilled, 45% single malt and 10% single grain whiskies made from various grains including Barley, malt, wheat, oat, rye and corn. 5 years aged and rested in juicy Imperial Stout Casks from Waterford's Hopfully Brewing Co. Awarded 98 points and gold "Outstanding" by the IWSC and achieved the IWSC Club Oenologique Irish Whiskey Trophy 2025.
